

Designer Intel: 27 Design Insiders On Using Natural Materials And Artistic Statements To Bring The Outdoors In

APRIL 18, 2025 BY JENNIFER QUAIL AND KELLY WALTERS

As the air is warming, the light is lingering and gardens are coming alive, it's the perfect time to refresh your space with a little help from the natural world. From biophilic patterns and organic materials to live plants and cut flowers, see how these 27 design professionals are making spring's rebirth part of everyday living.

We work with solid wood, natural stone and breathable wall finishes like clay and lime plaster — materials that regulate humidity, age with character and support a healthy indoor climate. We consciously avoid purely decorative elements. Instead, we let the materials speak for themselves. Plants are used to support the overall atmosphere, not to define it.
